TO DEDICATE HOME OF ST. ANN'S ASS'N TOMORROW AT 3

Flag-Raising, Speech Making and Sports Program To Be Featured

BOXING BOUTS, TOO

Tennis Matches and Bocce Games Arranged For The Day

Dedication of the St. Ann's Athletic Association club house and grounds and celebration of Flag Day will take place at elaborate ceremonies in front of the newly-built St. Ann's home, Wood and Franklin streets, tomorrow afternoon. The public is invited to attend and inspect the property of the association which was built at an expense of $10,000.

Principal speakers for the occasion will be: Rev. Father Marcellini Romango, Johnson Hetherington, Dr. J. Fred Wagner, John Leslie Killoyne, Esq., and Judge Calvin C. Boyer, of Doylestown. S. Joseph Alta, Jr., will be master of ceremonies.

There will be a presentation of a silk flag to the organization by Miss Marie Russo, daughter of Antonio Russo, one of the leaders instrumental in the building of the present association. The flag will be received on behalf of the St. Ann's organization by Patsy Maffo, president, and then will be raised to the flag pole.

Organizations of Bristol have been invited to attend and the American Legion Cadets will parade to the building and witness the flag-raising exercises. The Cadets will form at the post home at one o'clock, march down Radcliffe street to Fillmore and there the members of the Bristol Democratic Club will join them. They will continue to Wood street and will be joined by the members of the Sons of Italy and Italian Mutual Aid Society. The members of the St. Ann's association will meet at their building. The affair at the newly-dedicated building will take place promptly at two o'clock.

The athletic director of the association, Samuel Maffo, has arranged for a fine afternoon of entertainment. A ring will be erected in the rear of the club and boxing and wrestling bouts will take place. The following will don the mitts for the boxing: Johnny Straffe, Ardo Straffe, Philip "Kid Squareyes" Quilf, Nick "Bullets" Indelicato, John "Dundee" Raccagno, "Eddie" Maffo, "Sammy" Maffo, and "Jole" Martin.

Tennis matches will be played between members of the St. Ann's club and the Knights of Columbus and exhibitions will be given by Herbert Lawrence, Nelson Green, Franklin Fine, and Joseph Alta, of Bristol, and several others from Philadelphia. Bocce games will take place between the teams of the Penn-Jersey Bocce League, namely: Riverside, Tacony Republican Club, Tacony Independent Italian-American Club, St. Ann's, Bristol, Bocce Club, and the Bristol Democratic Club.

The St. Ann's Athletic Association Ladies Auxiliary will also aid in the dedication exercises. Members of the committee working on the affair are: Mrs. Anthony Russo, Mrs. Daisy Lincoln, Miss Anna Nicols, Miss Marie Russo, Mrs. Frank Denny, Mrs. Anna Sabatini, and Mrs. Edward Maffo.

Movements which led to the building of the present St. Ann's structure began during the month of October, 1932, at the time when the Bristol Basketball League was formed. The circuit was formed with no team representing the Italian-American youths of Bristol. A group of citizens who sensed the need of such an organization began plans which led to the forming of a club over a store. Subsequently, the franchise of one of the teams in the basketball league was taken over by the organization which took the name of St. Ann's Athletic Association.

Search Blast Ruins

Wittenburg, Germany, June 14—Work was resumed in undamaged portions of the Westphalian and Anhalt munitions plant at Reinsdorf today, as rescuers searched for additional bodies in the wreckage left by a series of explosions which claimed at least 52 lives.

Adhering to official government figures of 26 dead and 26 missing, Dr. Gehrens, director of the munitions firm, declared:

"I can only repeat what the authorities have issued—that we are rapidly restoring order from the confusion. We have now recovered 26 bodies, and another 26 are missing, and assumed dead in the debris."

Resume Strike Negotiations

Camden, N. J., June 14—Negotiations between officials of the New York Shipbuilding Corporation and representatives of the plant's 4,600 striking employees were resumed today in an effort to end the five week dead-lock that has delayed work on the 52 million dollars worth of naval shipbuilding.

Union leaders reiterated a willingness to parley their three major demands on a give-and-take basis, but the company has expressed no change in its policy of "not budging an inch."

POCONO REGION IS ONE OF GREAT BEAUTY

Monroe County Possesses Unusual Charm for Those Who Love Mountains

HAVE WINTER SPORTS

This is the eleventh of a series of articles prepared under the direction of Warren Van Dyke, Secretary of Highways, in a campaign to stimulate interest in the tourist and recreational advantages of Pennsylvania. Today's story deals with the beauties of the Pocono Mountain region.

HARRISBURG, June 14—An all year 'round playground which can be found in the Pocono Mountain region of Monroe County is one of the brightest spots in Pennsylvania's recreational map.

To those who love the mountains the Pocono region possesses unusual charm. Located within easy access of eastern metropolitan centers of population, the Poconos offer splendid opportunity for recreation, health and sport.

Winter sports comparatively of recent innovation in the Poconos are rapidly bringing the region to the forefront of American winter resorts, while in its program of summer sports, the Poconos have long been recognized as the garden spot of the East.

When William Penn landed in Philadelphia, the Pocono region was already inhabited by the sturdy Dutch, who had come down from New York State through the Delaware Valley and settled near what is now Shawnee.

The great Lenape Tribe of Indians had for ages before considered the Valley of the Delaware their natural home.

As the white man forced the Indians out, trouble developed which culminated in the Revolution.

NAVY OFFICERS STILL DEBATING THE VALUE OF DIRIGIBLES TO FLEET

War Game Leaves Them With Big Ship Doubles

This is the third of a series of descriptive articles by an International News Service staff correspondent who accompanied the fleet in its secret maneuvers.

By Ralph B. Jordan
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
ABOARD U. S. S. PENNSYLVANIA, WITH UNITED STATES FLEET, June 14—(INS)—Two subjects which bring forth widely varied opinions among officers of the United States Fleet, now maneuvering in the Pacific, are battleships and dirigibles.

The officers do not differ as to the importance of battleships but they do disagree on the type which should be built.

There is one group which thinks that battleships of the present tonnage, around 34,000 tons, will prove too slow and cumbersome for future naval engagements.

"I think," one officer told International News Service, "that the future of the battleship lies in small, quickly maneuverable fighters which will carry lighter armor but heavy guns. The big guns will furnish the necessary shocking power to destroy an enemy fleet and the speed of the smaller, faster ships will prove their main defense rather than the present heavy armor."

Another school of thought is represented by the officer who said: "The axiom that a good big ship can whip a good small ship is just as true now as it ever was. I believe the trend in battleships will be toward the type represented by Britain's two latest, bigger than ever, more heavily armed and with bigger guns. These tremendous ships are also the fastest. A ship doesn't have to be small to be speedy."

"A ship of this type can choose its own fight, standing off with its speed until it has an enemy under its guns but still is out of range of the enemy. It can do terrific damage without being hurt itself."

As to dirigibles, one officer said: "They are absolutely necessary for long distance scouting. They can keep away from an enemy and yet have him under observation. And a fleet with an enemy under observation has an untold advantage for maneuvering into position to do the greatest destruction."

"Our dirigibles were never tested fairly. They were assigned tasks for which they were not designed. They cannot fight and should not be placed in a position where they will have to fight. We must build more dirigibles."

"Horse feathers," said another officer, or something to that effect. "Dirigibles are just another worry with a fleet. It's only a question of whether they will fly or not. They'll either fall of their own accord or be shot down quickly."

The cups are the gift of Frank Streit, proprietor of the park, and each has been suitably engraved with the event and date, the name of the winning companies to be placed thereon after Saturday's function.

The big picnic scheduled for Saturday afternoon, together with an apparatus parade in the borough of Hulmeville and vicinity, will also be augmented by the annual meeting of the firemen's association at Doylestown, the county seat, this evening.

In charge of plans for the picnic and contests are the following who form the main committee: Lloyd Crouthamel, Dublin, chairman; Robert Landis, Quakertown; Frank Stover, Doylestown; George Duke, Morrisville; William Stackhouse and Thomas K. Schatt, Hulmeville.

Saturday's program will get underway with formation for the parade of apparatus at 12:30. The five contests in which many companies are expected to enter will include: Water battle (for championship of Bucks County), booster contest, snap coupling pump and connection contest, screw coupling pump and connection contest, most efficient piece of apparatus on ground. All decisions of the judges will be accepted as final. The judges include: James B. Gilbert, Holmesburg, former chief instructor of the Philadelphia Fire Department; Nelson Oblinger, Lambertville, assistant fire chief of Lambertville, N. J.; Company, and ex-chief of that department; William Green, Green Lane, Montgomery County, fire marshal of Montgomery County. Arrangements have been made to have photographs taken of the winning group after each event. Another feature will be the lining-up of apparatus along the Nesheaminy Creek for a pumping demonstration.

The contests are scheduled to commence at two o'clock, the first event being the water battle between the companies of the Upper and Lower parts of the county. Tax Justice League Elects New Officers

DOYLESTOWN, June 14—With about 300 in attendance, the annual meeting of the Bucks county unit of the Penna. Tax Justice League was held here, Wednesday night, in the court house, when the Doylestown Band furnished music and Charles Schabinger led group singing.

An election of officers resulted as follows: President, Col. Roger O. Mason, New Britain; first vice-president, William Wilhelm, Sellersville; second vice-president, Colonel George VanOrden, New Hope; third vice-president, Markus Boyd, Hilltown; secretary, E. P. Rosensberger, Doylestown township; treasurer, Edward H. Taylor, Chalfont.

Henry Arnold Todd was elected honorary president.

Brief messages were brought by H. L. Shank, Lancaster, president of the Penna. Tax Justice League; C. V. Shoup, Allegheny county, executive secretary of the state organization, and Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti, who was the principal speaker.

Mr. Margiotti, in a political speech in support of Governor Earle's program, discussed the advisability of relieving real estate of its heavy share of taxation, holding that a larger proportion should be placed on invested wealth.

He also spoke of the steps taken to revise the State Constitution, and what has been done at the direction of the administration to increase the tax burden of the manufacturers to $33,000,000.

In conclusion he devoted his remarks to an attack on legislators and others who have sought to avoid additional taxation which would have added $100,000,000 to State expenses on the Earle program, declared by opposition Senate leaders and Auditor General Charles A. Waters as unnecessary.

The concluding feature of the meeting was the adoption of a resolution by the Bucks county unit demanding that the cost of government shall not be greater than is required for efficiency, careful revision of governmental agencies, and for a committee of the league to study the present structure and operation of municipal and county governments.

FLAGS FOR FLAG DAY

Today is celebrated as Flag Day. If there is one day in the year that warrants floating the colors, that is Flag Day.

The older generation, especially that group whose patriotic blood runs strong, must win at the seeming lack of interest which this generation shows in the display of Old Glory. Time was not so many years ago when every holiday found every loyal community flooded in red and white and blue. It is not so now. Memorial Day, Independence Day, the birthdays of our national heroes are marked by the few rather than the many displays of the flag.

Surely the reason is not the lack of basic patriotism. The war record of America answers that. It may be the public's absorption in other things. There may be a feeling that tacking a flag to a house is after all not a sure sign of devotion to country, that deeds rather than displays count. Thoughtlessness is responsible for most of it. At the same time it is unfortunate.

Of all days in the year when the flag should fly, Flag Day is the day.

TEMERARIOUS INDEED

Bold is the man who judges a baby show; but temerarious is he who compiles a list of the dozen greatest universities in America. That fashionable adjective, temerarious, is borrowed from the greatly daring compiler, himself, Edwin R. Embree, who writes of his venture in the Atlantic Monthly.

Mr. Embree, president of the Julius Rosenwald Fund and a nationally recognized authority on matters educational, recalls that last winter, "in answering a politician's fantastic claims for the state university of his bailiwick," he hazarded a list of the dozen best. Then broke the storm about his "temerarious head."

University presidents and professors deluged Mr. Embree with complaints, questions, Universities which he rated high protested because they were not rated higher. Universities which he had left off the list "wailed and a few of them looked eagerly toward the libel courts." Students and their parents bombarded Mr. Embree with requests for advice on where to go to college. Ambitious instructors suggested they would appreciate his aid in landing jobs on faculties of his preferred universities.

In only one quarter was Mr. Embree's list received with serene, matter-of-fact acquiescence. That was in Cambridge, Mass. For Harvard was first in Mr. Embree's list. In case you have forgotten the rest of the list, made public last winter, here it is:

2—Chicago; 3—Columbia; 4—California; 5—Yale; 6—Michigan; 7—Cornell; 8—Princeton; 9—John Hopkins; 10—Wisconsin; 11—Minnesota.

Mr. Embree left twelfth place vacant. He explains that he did this for two reasons: first, to allow himself "an alley of escape from the fierce claims of a multitude of universities;" second, because he found no university which approached the eminence of the eleven selected by his tests of academic excellence.

Sofia recently reported a great migration of eagles, but made no mention of a blue one.

If there were no such thing as a compromise, Senator Harlan would create it.

BEHIND the SCENES in HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL

Copyright, 1935.

King Features Syndicate, Inc. HOLLYWOOD.—Santa Anita set Hollywood to dreaming of racing stables, and Spencer Tracy means to make his dream come true.

The star, who is one of filmland's polo enthusiasts and who already owns 12 ponies, is laying plans to breed thoroughbreds and to acquire a stable of 20 race horses.

Spence has the nucleus right now on his Valley Ranch, once the home of Gary Cooper.

His prize possession is April Kelly, sired by Neil McCarthy's Tick-On and with another money horse, On Watch, among its ancestors. A mare called Wasp also rates as class.

For the moment, Spence is busy working in "The Murder Man" at M. G. M. He has promised his family a trip to Europe later in the summer, but on his return, will concentrate on his new hobby.

Gloria Stuart expects to enter the Santa Monica hospital this month to await the birth of her baby. She and Arthur Sheekman won't have to argue about naming it, either. As I printed once before (but you may have forgotten), a girl will be named Sylvia or a boy Anthony. Twins might cause complications, but they are not expected.

One of the swifter retorts—soft-spoken and yet to the point—was made the other night by Jack La Rue.

The Latin actor was sitting in a late spot in a party with Marilyn Miller and her husband and several other celebrities. A tipsy girl, on her way across the room, sighted him. She reeled up and attempted to throw her arms around Jack's neck.

"Baby," she cried, "Where have you been all my life?"

La Rue politely but firmly disengaged himself.

"On location," he squelched.

Homesickness for the scenes of his boyhood is taking Cary Grant on a pilgrimage to England. He'll revisit the Fairfield Academy in Bristol where he got his early education.

WHOSE WIFE? A CYRUS K. MANTEL MURDER MYSTERY

by CLADYS SHAW ERSKINE AND IVAN FIRTH

CHAPTER XXI

Cyrus K. Mantel and Lawrence Vane bent together over the big sketchbooks, which Cyrus K. had had expressed a desire to see.

"These are of Isobel, my wife," said Vane, indicating two very attractive studies, semi-draped. "I did these of her quite a while ago. You know she was my model before we were married." He seemed a little embarrassed as he spoke.

"You had many other models?" Cyrus K. was casual.

"Oh, yes, quite a number. You know, portraiture is my specialty, but I have done a number of murals. In fact, I got a large contract for murals for a new library out West—I had already started some of the sketches."

He shuffled through the portfolio, and drew forth several interesting, rough sketches, all in the nude, and most of the feminine figures in some graceful posture of the dance. They looked like the beginnings of what would later develop into a painting that might be titled "Spring."

"Did your wife pose for any of these?" Cyrus K. asked.

"No, none of them. She was best in still, languorous poses."

Cyrus K. looked up keenly.

"Did your wife object to any of your other models?" he asked.

"Yes. She did." Vane leaned back in his chair, and looked Cyrus K. in the eyes for a long moment, and then seemed to come to a decision.

"Mantel," he said seriously.

"This is the first time we have been alone, so that I could really talk to you, since you came down to the Tomb. There are several things that I would like very much to tell you—things that I feel you should know, and that might be of help to you in this awful affair."

Mantel placed the sketches he held carefully back in the folder, turned, and gave his full attention to the young artist.

"Yes?" he said. "Then by all means tell me now."

"Some of these things are so terrible to me, that I have never breathed them to a living soul, since I discovered them myself. I feel that now the time has come for me to forget my own feelings, my own shame, and tell you everything. My wife, my wife did not love me."

"So?" said Cyrus K. gently.

"When did you first discover this?"

"The first week we were married," Vane's voice was low but steady. "I also discovered that Isobel had married me for position, and money. She liked the dignity of being a married woman. Then I began to hear things about her past life—I couldn't believe them at first."

"But you came to believe them later?" Cyrus K. asked.

"I had to."

"Did this knowledge make you turn against your wife?"

"In a way, it did, of course. But, you see, Mr. Mantel, she had always repulsed my advances, and my infatuation had already begun to fade. So, when I found out all these other things, it was a blow, but I could take it more easily than would have been possible had I felt toward her as I thought I did at first."

"Then you no longer loved your wife?" Cyrus K. persisted.

"I wouldn't say that exactly," Vane was thoughtful. "I had ceased to desire her, to love her in the way a man loves the woman who is his wife—but I did not hate her. Rather I loved her in the way a guardian might love a precocious child, and the artist in me always loved her beauty, and could not believe that so perfect a thing of beauty could be only an empty shell."

"Was there anything else, that you particularly wanted me to know?"

"Yes," Vane hesitated. "One other thing that I had just found out, and which caused me great distress on Isobel's own account—a thing that made me watch her carefully all the time, to see that she did no injury to herself—or to another."

Mantel leaned forward tensely.

"Yes? What was that?" he prompted.

"My wife was a drug addict!" Vane said.

"Now we're getting somewhere," Cyrus K. sounded pleased. "Now we've got more to work on. A drug addict, eh?" He put his hand on the younger man's knee as he saw him wince.

"You must forgive me," he begged. "I am so anxious to help you, that for the moment I forgot the personal side of it, and your distress."

He paused a moment, and as the other said nothing, went on:

"Do you know what drug your wife used?"

"Cocaine. Either in liquid or powder form—any way she could get it."

"And if she was ever without the drug, how did it affect her?"

"She went berserk." A cloud passed over Vane's eyes as he recalled scenes in the immediate past. "She was always erratic, but when the need of the drug was on her, she lost all control."

"One, principally when I was concentrated on some work that might cause eye-strain."

"Are you accustomed to taking anything for these headaches?"

"No. Never. I usually walk them off."

"You say you were working on the murals. Did you have a model here?"

"Yes. A model I have used a great deal before. I wanted to do a series of sketches from her, and then I would work from them on the enlarging for the actual scenes."

"How late did you work?"

"The light wasn't good after four. There was a storm brewing, so I quit about that hour."

"Then what happened?"

"The model left," said Vane, "and my wife came in. She had been to the theatre with some friend, and then she decided that we would stay at home for supper."

"Did you prepare this yourselves, or do you have a maid?" asked Cyrus K.

"We do not keep a maid at the studio. There is maid service in the house, and I dislike having people pester about."

"What time did your wife get home, Mr. Vane?"

"It must have been about five or so."

"Isn't that very early to get out of the theatre?" Cyrus K. looked surprised.

"I didn't think of it before. The expression on Vane's face matched that of the little detective. "Now that you mention it, it was early, awfully early." He shrugged. "But then, she may have been bored with the play. It would be quite like her to leave before the end in that case."

"Mr. Vane—think hard now—can you tell me how long a time elapsed between the leaving of your model, and the arrival of your wife?"

"Yes. That's very easy. It was impressed on my mind because the storm broke just at that moment. I remember thinking that Janette, my model, would get caught in it, and at that precise minute Isobel came in."

"Then the model was still in the building at the time your wife arrived home?"

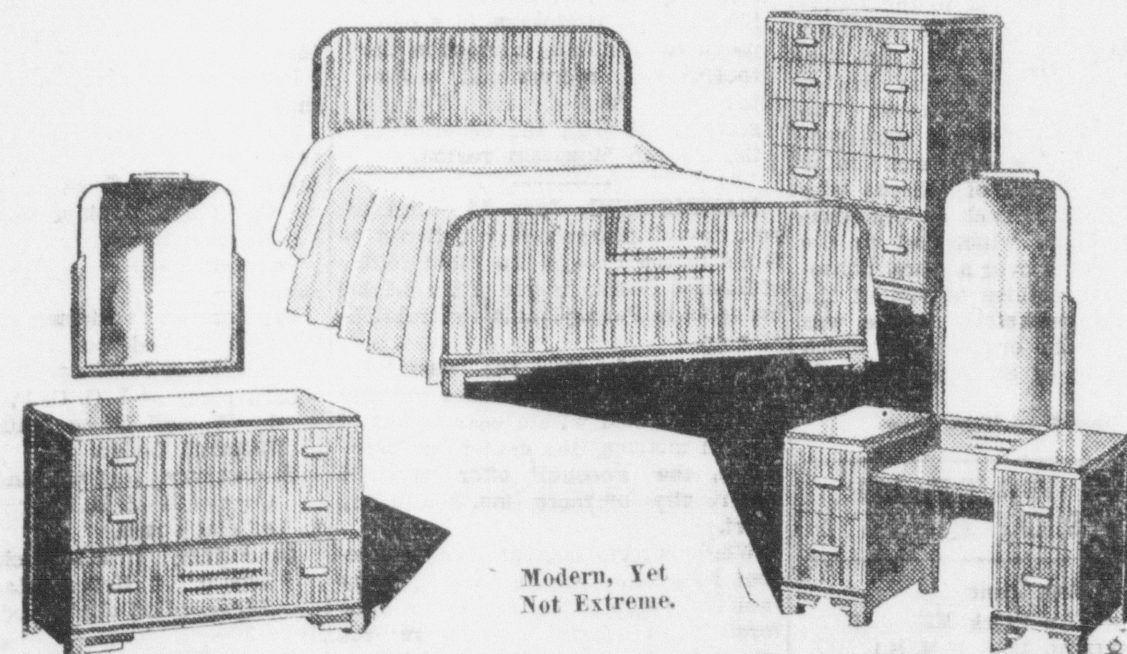

"Oh, yes. One of the elevators was out of order, so that it took quite a while to get either down from, or up to, the penthouse."

BRADDOCK WINS OVER MAX BAER

By Davis J. Walsh
(I. N. S. Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, June 14—(INS)—All hail to the new champion of all the heavyweights, James J. Braddock, husband, father, sound citizen and sterling example of the fact that the homelier virtues need not be dull. It is a fabulous tale of the down-and-out, almost in rags a year ago and unwanted anywhere who came back from the grave to win a title that hitherto had been reserved only to the elect of the profession. So all hail—and shed a tear.

Not, of course, for Braddock, the keto, who won the championship last night so easily at the close of fifteen rounds as to leave his witnesses gibbering and aghast at the absolute heresy of the thing.

Not, either, for Max (Mattewan) Baer, the mountebank champion, or for myself and the other sports writers who wrote so learnedly about the positive butcher that must come with Baer's victory. No, the tear is not for any of these but for all of them and the sport that could and did produce so ludicrous a thing as took place out there in the cool of a Long Island evening in the Garden's fateful bowl.

Alone out of all the mess stood the earnest James J. Braddock, a monument among chaos. His name must continue down through time as the only man who could not fight, but did win the time fame.

He had to, in order to beat the reputed odds of one to 10 at the ring-side, but there was nothing ludicrous about it.

"My left hand buckled under me in the second round," said Baer in his dressing room afterwards.

"I hated to use it after that. It was like a knife."

Too bad, then, that he didn't add the right to the list of damages, and thus have two knives, one in each hand. Maybe he couldn't fight; maybe he wouldn't fight; in any case he didn't.

A man giving Braddock too little credit today might as well change his name or leave the country. In other words you've simply got to recognize the fantastic nature of this victory gained so clearly as to leave the decision of three officials and 30,000 people practically unanimous. He had to have more than "destiny and the Garden bowl jinx" to do that.

But one wonders whether the intangible factors had as much to do with his victory as his stabbing accurate left jab, or his right-side weaver that kept him constantly out of range of Baer's Sunday punch, the right. The weaver came into execution at close quarters outside Braddock defeated Baer's long right hand by circling so constantly to right that at the bell opening a round they often met in a neutral corner.

Sometimes Braddock suddenly advanced to punch with both hands. Often he retreated behind a cover of lefts, then shoved himself and let go with a right. He knew if he stood and slugged for 15 seconds his finish was inevitable.

Baer looked as if he were going to come on in the sixth or seventh with rights under the heart, and short jolts or upper-cuts inside, but the promise was delusion. Our debonair champion apparently wasn't out to make a prize-fight last night, and many a time he stood and merely accepted punches without offering a return.

I gave him only four rounds. He came plodding, sometimes stumbling, but always clear-eyed and courageous in the end, as 30,000 stunned but prayerful spectators screamed him on, sensing one of the most dramatic moments in the history of the prize ring, they lifted his hand in victory, conqueror of the great, glamorous Baer by the unanimous decision of Referee Johnny McAvoy and two judges after 15 long, bitter rounds.

He had done the undoable, this 29-year-old Irish icicle from New Jersey, a 1 to 10 shot when he calmly touched his gloves to those of the glittering, sun-browned champion as the starting bell echoed through the great sunken bowl, rang out over the heads of the big crowd, come to hope for him, to suffer with him, not daring to believe he could win.

And as he struggled on, gamely fighting the best fight that was in him, taking everything the burly Baer hurled at him, shaking off punishment, stabbing out incessantly with his left, punching it out bitterly when he had to with the man whose name smashes completely demolished Max Schmeling and the former champion, Primo Carnera—you could feel the tensions increasing, feel breaths shortening, until the pressure was so great the hair stood up on the back of your neck.

MacKENZIE JUMPS OUT OF BLAZING MIDGET CAR

Doc MacKenzie, local speed demon who is pacing the field for the current Eastern dirt track championship, had a narrow escape in a blazing midget automobile last night in one of the special events on the weekly motorcycle racing card on the Yellowjacket Speedway, Frankford.

The bearded Philadelphia speedster, who carried off ninth place in the recent Indianapolis classic, was piloting a twin-cylinder midget racer in a specially arranged mile dash against Lou Wilson, of San Diego, who was operating a motorcycle.

On the backstretch of the third of the scheduled five-lap test, the midget car suddenly caught fire. MacKenzie, a veteran in the racing game, jumped clear out of the undersized racer and into the infield. In the next few seconds flames enveloped the car and it was a good five minutes before track officials, using hand extinguishers, had the blaze under control.

OPENS GOLF COURSE BY DRIVING BALL WITH BAT

CINCINNATI, O., June 12—(INS)—

Not wishing to risk his vanity by "fanning" the first drive with a puny driver, Max Hirsch, president of the city recreation commission, officially opened the California municipal links here recently by making his "tee shot" with a baseball bat.

Hirsch, explaining "I felt safer with a ball bat," stepped up to the first tee to make the first official shot opening the new municipal course with a bludgeon significant of diamond wars, a baseball bat, and proceeded to "swat" the small golf pellet a good many yards further than his competitors, who used the "insignificant" drivers.

nated in the massacres of Wyoming and Cherry Valleys and his army into the red man's stronghold concluding in a victory for the settlers. One of the scenic marvels of the Pocono region is the Delaware Water Gap, located in the Kittatinny range of the Blue Ridge Mountains. The famous notch, through which centuries ago the river forced its journey to the sea, is but one feature of this enchanting region.

The beauties of the Pocono region at this time of the year beggars description—its hills and valley adorned with lavish displays of pink-tinted laurel which forms the setting for the Laurel Blossom Festival, which will open on June 18 and conclude on June 23.

Beautiful young women representing colleges of the State will participate in the Festival and one of their number chosen by Governor George H. Earle will act as queen of the fete. There is no scene at any other season of the year that can compare with the splendor of the Poconos during Laurel Blossom Time.

The Pocono region boasts more waterfalls than any locality east of the Rockies and in most cases good highways lead right up to the falls. Parking places are provided and if bathing or fishing is desired, these recreations are available.

Scattered through the region are dozens of lakes, all of pure mountain water. Deep water and distance make motor boating enjoyable. Glorious sunshine, without enervating humidity make sun bathing and calisthenics at Monroe beneficial. Motor-boat racing, water pageants and special aquatic events are frequent occurrences throughout the region.

There are nine modern golf courses located in strategic points in the Poconos. The golf courses are all located in the most beautiful scenic surroundings and "looking up" is no penalty on Pocono courses—there is lots to be seen everywhere.

There are plenty of fish in Pocono lakes and streams—trout, bass, perch, pickerel, wall-eyed pike.

Balmy days and cool nights mark the climate in the Poconos and throughout the vast area recreational camps are found in profusion, where children and grownups escape the summer's heat in the invigorating mountain atmosphere. Excellent riding academies are located throughout the region and in late July horse lovers gather at the "Arena in the clouds" for the Pocono horse show which has become one of the leading social events of the mountain season. Many of the country's best horses are exhibited at the two-day show.

The Stroudsburg—Stroudsburg and East Stroudsburg—are the natural business, financial and industrial centers of the Pocono region. Originally a frontier fort, Stroudsburg gave refuge to the refugees driven from their homes during the Wyoming Massacre.

Hotels to suit every purse and to meet every need are found nestled in the most picturesque spots in this beautiful region.

Pennsylvania can well be proud of the Poconos which each year attract a great number of visitors not only from the Keystone State, but from every corner of the nation.

The organization began to grow as the baseball season of 1933 approached. The baseball team, after much difficulty captured the Bristol Twilight League championship, which led to a large increase in membership as the younger fellows, just graduating from high school, realized the need of organized effort to place the St. Ann's club on the sporting map of the county, joined the organization.

The increase in membership forced the organization to vacate the small quarters over the store and efforts to secure a larger place were successful. The property at 509 Wood street was the clubrooms until an undefeated football season and county championship football season made another large jump in membership. In fact,

HIBERNIANS NEARLY END FIRST HALF OF LEAGUE

The Hibernians came close to ending the first half of the Lower Bucks County League last night on Leedom's field. Up until the seventh inning it looked as if the Hulmeville club would be crowned first half champions but suddenly the Hibs' defense cracked and the Edgely Braves pushed over two runs on two errors and a triple to beat the Hibs, 5-4, and still have a mathematical chance of winning the first half.

An error by "Joie" Roe started the Braves off to their rally. Joe muffed up a grounder by Bud Wright. Hal Snyder bore down and got both Massilla and Force on grounders. Hines crossed the plate to right and Wright cracked a triple with the deadlocking tally. "Bill" Dougherty fumbled a roller by John Dougherty and Hines denied the home pentagon with the deciding run of the fracas. Dougherty went down trying to steal second, Lyzack to Dougherty.

Hal Snyder hurled wonderful ball for the Hibernians, allowing the Braves but four hits. However, two of those were triples which abated by errors gave the winners all their tales. Thompson connected for the entire crop of runs by the losing club was also unearned. The Hibs made six hits, all singles off the slants of "Pete" Firce. Firce fanned eight batters and issued one pass while Snyder fanned five and walked two.

CASEYS FAIL TO HOLD EARLY LEAD THEY GAINED

The Caseys again failed to hold an early lead as they dropped a 6-4 decision to the Newport Road Men's Club last night in a Bristol Twilight League game played on the Newportville diamond. The Newporters scored twice in the fifth to break a tie and win the fracas.

As usual the Caseys forged into the lead in the first session and remained there until the fourth when the Kenny boys scored three times to tie the markers. The Caseys passed up several opportunities to score between these frames. In the last half of the fifth the Road Men's Club registered twice, winning the game.

Ziegler fled out to Paul Moore to open the frame. VanDine hit to McDevitt who fumbled. Hovatter was hit with a pitched ball. Moore also got under Kirk's fly for the second out. Crossley lifted a high fly which David got under but dropped after having the ball in his mitt. Hovatter and VanDine crossed on the play. Conney made a hit but Swope could not hit the ball by the pitcher.

E. McDevitt's back-handed catch of a liner from the bat of "Eddie" Bartle in the 4th inning featured the game.

RACING DEVOTEES SEE FAMOUS AUTO DRIVER

Devotees of the exciting, hazardous sport of automobile racing paid tribute today to a coterie of internationally famous stars of the roaring road gathered in Philadelphia for the 100 miles at super-speed to be presented at Langhorne Speedway Sunday afternoon by Ralph A. Hankinson.

Kelly Pettilo, Indianapolis champion; Babe Stapp and Chester Gardner from far-away Los Angeles; Mauri Rose, the sensational little Jewish driver from Dayton, O., and the bery of eastern aces were surrounded by hero worshippers.

Pettilo naturally attracted the most attention as the descendant of the Caesars recently let go of the business end of a push-cart to grab the wheel of a roaring motor and win America's most prized sweepstakes event. Pettilo was presented to the Italian Consul, P. Margotti at the Royal Italian Consulate in Philadelphia.

"I am confident I will meet with the same success in dirt track competitions as I did at Indianapolis on the bricks," Pettilo told interviewers. "I have been at Langhorne before but have never competed. Nevertheless I know the track and I think I can drive it as well as any other man."

Pettilo's supreme self confidence impressed newspaper men and rail-birds alike, and it was the consensus of opinion that he will drive his hardest in an effort to continue adding to the cash and laurels he gained at Indianapolis.

Gardner, Stapp, and Rose took brief workouts on the circular oval and pronounced it to be in excellent condition. Neither Mackenzie nor Sall went out as they know every twist of the east's only especially built auto speedway.

Time trials will be staged tomorrow afternoon in order to avoid any possible delay in the starting of the first competitive event at 3 p. m., day-light time, Sunday. Ralph Hankinson, the promoter, announced the advance sale of tickets is greater than it was for the May 12 Langhorne meet when all previous attendance records were shattered.

Samuel Stringer and Miss Rachel Reilly visited Mr. and Mrs. Barton Kelly, Sunday.

THREE BIG GAMES ARE BOOKED FOR TOMORROW

Three important Delaware River League matches will be played in this section tomorrow. The most outstanding of the three is the game to be played at Edgely where the Edgely Braves and the Dolington team battle it out for first place. At Hulmeville, Howard Black's team, which is giving the leaders a close race, will play the Hibernians. Fifth place will be at stake in the contest between the Lambertville Top Rock club and Bristol A. A. on Leedom's field.

Manager Fred Hibbs is undecided as to whom he will send against the Dolington team. He has the use of either "Jake" Prall or "Pete" Firce. The Dolington manager, Jack McGarry, will send Cliff Matthew against the Braves. The Edgelyites are leading the circuit by a one-half game, the result of Lambertville's surprise win over Dolington last Sunday.

Hulmeville A. A. is a one-half game in the rear of the Dolington team and if victorious against the Hibs will gain ground on one of the leading clubs. Hulmeville will also be home on Sunday, meeting the fast Washington Crossing team.

Manager Mulholland of the A. A. team will make a strong bid for fifth place by taking over the Lambertville team here Saturday and then going to Dolington Sunday and send "Charlie" Whyne against the boys of McGarry. The Hibernians will make an effort to vacate the cellar by beating Hulmeville tomorrow and Morrisville on Leedom's field, Sunday.

Games are scheduled to begin at three o'clock sharp.
